

VISIT TO DEFENCE SCHOOL OF TRANSPORT

On Tuesday 28th April, 38 Carmen and their guests visited the Defence School of Transport at Normandy Barracks, Located at Normandy Barracks, Leconfield, near Beverley in the East Riding of Yorkshire.

The school, part of the Defence College of Support (Headquarters at Worthy Down) is a tri-Service organisation responsible for driver training and transport management training to personnel from the Army, Royal Air Force and Royal Marines.

Formally the site of RAF Leconfield, it initially became the Army School of Mechanical Transport in 1977 and then became the Defence School of Transport in 1996 when it took responsibility for training personnel of all three Services.

As the photos, the visit was thoroughly enjoyed by all and we thank the Commandant for inviting us and giving us the opportunity to witness the scale of the operation and the variety of training given.

At the end of the visit, gifts were exchanged between the Master, Andy Miles, and the Commandant, Colonel Laura Craig-Braddock.
